Dearest Fuzzy-

If you will excuse the pencil I will have time to write you a little note before going out to dinner- I received your letter this morning dear, and feel very very sorry mine didn't reach you before you wrote it. At any rate you have had two since, so it's all right now. Lulu and Anita were here this morning, wanted Margie and me to dine with them this evening, of course I can't as I'm going to the Shippen's, but Margie will- I have just received a Chester paper with an account of the English Tea Party, isn't it nice that it was so successful this year? Dr. Currie was evidently thoroughly appreciated- his wife will be glad to see it, for she was rather nervous about his going, fearing his remarks last year were too frivolous, or something of the kind. I haven't neglected you this week, have I, Fuzzy darling? Hope you will enjoy your dissipation to-morrow evening, also that Mr. Peters will come out of his shell. Anna's letter just received to-day, it was directed to East, so give her my love and tell her I forgive her 'cause it was such a nice one.

Ever your loving,
D.

Thursday afternoon.
