Darling fuzzy boy-

I have just come from a wedding, don't you wish you had been there? I shall have to perfectly tear to dress for Aunt Sallie's dinner, it gets dark so fearfully soon, that if I started from here at two it would be probably black night before I got there- So you haven't made up your mind yet Fuz about coming on to me to morrow- well I have for you, so it's all the same- and think how nice it will be for us to be together all day Thursday- I wrote to Julia Lewis this morning- I had such an unforgettable dream last night about their Thanksgiving dinner that, I thought it much better to write her and get it off my mind. By the way last Sunday was "stir up" Sunday after all, and that collect was read at Trinity- where were our ears? I have at least been to see Madame, she is just as nice as ever- Margie and I sallied forth yesterday afternoon to make some duty visits- and how devoutly we wished that everyone would be out- but no such luck- we saw every body- and finally wound up with Aunts M & L- Ettie and I are going to see them to-morrow- I am glad my sleepy boy rested going home in the cars- be sure and not feel tired dear love when you come on to-morrow. Don't imagine from my writing that I have had a paralytic stroke, it's only that my hands are frozen- Be sure you give my love to your family and tell them that I hope to see them now in a very short time- I wish it nice to-morrow. Good bye darling boy, tell Sal to hug you for me.

Your loving,
Daisy
