My dearest Fuzzy boy,

I have just come in from a delightful drive with Ettie through the park- I am sure you will be glad to hear that her cold is much better- Mother took Madge to the Met. Museum this afternoon, she is talking to Dr. Potter

"her first attachment," in the parlor just now, so I don't know what she thought of our pictures yet. Madge is going to remain in N.Y. until Friday, when, oh joyful day, we all go home together- by the way Uncle Charlie told Madge yesterday that he thought it very queer, I had only been to see them twice- decidedly a mistake, for I've been there six times if I have once. I was so overcome with sleep after you left last night that I was obliged to retire at half past nine, did you ever hear of such stupidity? This morning I amused myself reading- well I won't tell you what, for you can imagine it was "Blackstone" if you like- Don't forget to give my love to your family this time, will you? And oh, think of Friday-Your own loving,

Daisy-
