

Washington.

Sunday.

Dearest Mother,

The enclosed picture reminds me vividly of the winter trip you and I and little Louise took years ago to see the Inn Bridge. Do you remember the people coasting down these snow hills? I remember climbing to the top of one of them - but we didn't have our sled with us, did we?

I went to Howard's supper meeting (to the meeting not the supper) on Thursday night in Annapolis. Did I write you that? He had a fine lot of legislators and they all enjoyed it. I wish I could remember all the amusing stories Dr Tom~~p~~kins told. Just one after the other, and another and another, and all good - at 7.45 the whole party adjourned upstairs to the church and more people came in, and Howard presided and spoke charmingly, and Dr Tomkins spoke again, and he brought in ratification of the suffrage amendment (per request of D.L.), and Bishop McDowell spoke - very imply indeed, but the men loved what he said - I had thought it almost too simple, but they didn't. You see I know a lot of them now, and they told me the next day how much they had enjoyed the speeches etc.

Alcie Paul + I have just been lunching at the Lafayette with Mr John Milholland and another man, a New Jersey lawyer. We had a nice lunch and an interesting time.

I met one of my Georgia friends yesterday, a newspaper man; and he offered to help me in my work - so I have just been dictating what I want printed in the Georgia paper (The Atlanta Constitution) about the Maryland legislature. He will send the paper to me + I will have it reprinted on a leaflet + placed on every member's desk the day after I receive it at Annapolis.

Dear love to my precious mother - from her devoted daughter,

Dora.
